WEATHER KEY POINTS

02/08/21 - 02/14/21

Monday - Wednesday

- Dry and mild weather continues through Sunday and into the beginning of next week, with some patchy dense fog possible in the Central Valley, mountain valleys, and along the coastline
- Locally gusty winds are expected at times over the southern California mountains through early in the week, but fire weather concerns remain low
- Some light drizzle or snow flurries are possible at times, especially in the foothills and mountains, but no impacts are expected

Thursday - Sunday

- A series of storm systems are expected to move across the state starting Thursday afternoon and continuing through the weekend
- These storms are expected to bring widespread light to moderate valley rain and mountain snowfall
 - Travel impacts are possible due to accumulating mountain snow and gusty winds
